

MRS. FISKE AS "HEDDA GABLER"

Audience at Revival at the Manhattan Warrants that Ibsen is Becoming Both Fashionable and Popular.

STAR'S HEDDA PROVES CLEVERER AND COLDER.

Performance Not So Good as Last Season, However—Marie Cahill Prepares to "Do" Mrs. Fiske at Fields's.

Vine leaves grew again in Greeley Square. And it didn't rain; indeed, the moon shone brightly; and the people were blithe and gay, and wore their first first-night clothes; long hair there might have been, but it was done up in the latest style; the long-haired freak was not among those present.

In fact, the audience at the Manhattan Theatre last night warranted the belief that Ibsen is becoming both popular and fashionable. Besides, it was a jolly gathering which came to see Mrs. Fiske's revival of "Hedda Gabler." The only sad, care-worn persons to be seen were those who assisted at the obsequies of "The Rich Mrs. Repton" the night before. It was cheering to note such a fun-loving and fun-making soul as Marie Cahill come in and take a seat as fearlessly as though Ibsen were an everyday affair with her.

Marie Cahill's Fell Purpose. At first it was suspected that Miss Cahill had come to "improve" her professional mind. But the confession was presently forthcoming that she was there with a sinister motive. She was there to study Mrs. Fiske. She's going to "do" her at Lew Fields's theatre-going to "do" her in two minutes; going to "do" her as Hedda, hooray! Imagine her coming on after a thumping piano prelude and carelessly remarking "Oh, yes; my friends tell me I play beautifully with my feet." And to see her wind up by consigning a "Higgledy-Piggledy" manuscript to the burning footlights, glowing the while "It is his—Edgar Smith's—she said!"

We shall see, as they say in London. More Clever and Cold. But about the revival? Quite forgot. Briefly, the performance was not quite so good as that given by Mrs. Fiske's company last season. This criticism does not apply to Mrs. Fiske, nor to William B. Mack. It was possible, by pricking up the ears, to understand almost everything Mrs. Fiske said. Her Hedda was, if possible, more clever and cold and cunning, than before. Her acting was as brilliant as her hair, but she still fails to get all that is possible out of the burning of Lovberg's manuscript. She does it too quickly, too mechanically.

Mr. Mack's admirable Tesman has not altered, except that he seems to have caught something of Mrs. Fiske's swiftness of speech, which robs his childishly enthusiastic "Just think of that, Hedda!" utterances of their simple humor.

A Trifle Too Much Manner.

George Arliss had too much "manner" to suit Assessor Brack. He has apparently grown to believe he is nothing if not subtle and sardonic. He emphasized these qualities from the first, but grew better as he went along. His monologue seemed as much out of the picture as the extremely up-to-date dinner jacket which John Mason put on after Lovberg. This Lovberg was altogether material and wholly wanting in idealism.

Laura McGilvray, while by no means a Carlotta Nilsson, was excellent as the shrinking and sensitive Mrs. Elvsted, and quite won the sympathy of the audience, while Mary Madden repeated her thoroughly natural performance of Aunt Julia.

CAVIAR DELAYS REJANE'S PLAY

Noted French Actress Taken Suddenly Ill by Overdose of "Throat Medicine" and Unable to Proceed Till Physician Acts.

Shortly before the curtain was to rise at the Lyric Theatre last night on "L'Hirondelle," Mme. Rejane, the noted French comedienne, was taken ill and appeared to be in great pain. She was deathly pale, and fearing that she might be in a serious condition her manager summoned Dr. W. C. Gilday, who was in a box.

Dr. Gilday found Mme. Rejane with a high pulse and so excited that she could hardly speak. She said she had taken a throat gargle and feared that she was poisoned. She looked at a small clock on her dressing table, and finding that it was five minutes past the time for the curtain to go up, became hysterical.

The physician demanded to see the gargle, and an English maid brought out an empty four-ounce box of Russian caviare.

"That isn't a gargle," said Dr. Gilday, "bring me the bottle."

"It is what she took, sir," declared the maid, "she eats some of this every night."

"Well," laughed the doctor, "if that is what she has eaten I don't wonder she is ill. But I guess she will come out all right."

And he ordered his patient to drink two glasses of hot water and take a dose of Jamaica ginger.

When Mme. Rejane had somewhat recovered, she said that she ate caviare before each performance to ease her throat and stimulate her, and that she had become so addicted to the habit that she could not go through the play without several spoonfuls. Last night she heard that Mrs. Roosevelt and a party of friends were in a stage box and being desirous of giving an especially brilliant performance she ate the whole box of caviare.

Dr. Gilday said that it is a wonder Mme. Rejane rallied as rapidly as she did. Mme. Rejane was able to begin her work ten minutes after the curtain should have gone up, but she was not fully recovered at the end of the play.

Distinctive Suits for Men at Fifteen Dollars.

Ready for Service.

That which transcends the established order and standards is termed extraordinary—it becomes a thing apart and a criterion. On every count our suits at fifteen dollars earn that distinction—they are extraordinary. The fabrics of which the garments are fashioned are high in character, and to a degree exclusive in design. The tailoring defines an element of individuality and distinctiveness which none but a master of the craft can express. The styles are abreast with the hour, if not beyond it. The service, our high standard insures. All this is extraordinary and wholly foreign to suits which our contemporaries offer even at twenty dollars.

Six single-breasted models in twenty distinctive styles of fabrics. Four double-breasted models in sixteen distinctive styles of fabrics. Embracing cheviot, thibet, worsted, cassimere, tweed and winter-weight homespun, in a most exhaustive collection of the season's most exclusive designs and colors.

FOR SATURDAY.

$3.00 and $3.50 Hats for Men at $2.00.

To the man who made the hats they represent a tragedy of errors—not so far as the hats are concerned, but in the conduct of his shop. The hats were to be with us on the first of last month; the first of this found them somewhere between Chicago and the far coast. That was the error. The penalty was a price concession of more than one-third, which you may have. There are black derbies and soft hats in models which are replicas of those which the most exclusive shops present.

OUR $3 FOOTWEAR

will prove a revelation to every MAN and WOMAN who has always considered $5 and $6 necessary for perfect shoes.

It is that shape-conforming principle, executed with custom-made exactness, that counts in shoe making; the sort of custom making that characterizes Frazin & Oppenheim footwear at $3.00.

It does not matter what peculiarities your natural foot possesses, we have a shape for it in just the size you ought to wear.

We make more variations of styles, lasts and leathers in men's and women's footwear at $3 than any other shoe house in existence.

The Winter Styles

are especially commendable for their warmth and smartness. Leathers are specially tanned to protect the feet against "frost-biting" coldness. It's merely another instance of our inimitable "know-how" in shoe construction.
